Just so there is no confusion, Violate is a fetish club, not a sex/swingers club. Although there is the odd bit of nudity, or playful groping, people don't have sex there, except maybe the odd blowjob in the toilet which happens at every night club. Swingers who go can use it to meet others and can arrange parties for after. The club does have a dress code, sexy/fetish, pvc, rubber, leather, naughty underwear, uniform etc... although they will allow you in if you're dressed in smart black but you will feel uncomfortable and be the odd ones out when all around you are dressed sexy & raunchy. Not all who go are swingers, though there are a few, many of the people are into BDSM and they have a selection of bondage & spanking equipment in the playrooms which people are able to use. At the current venue in Glasgow, they have a dance hall & Bar downstairs, and playrooms and a relaxing lounge upstairs. The people who attend range from posing goths to swinging groups, There is a wide range of age groups from early 20's to couples in their 60's. Straight, bi & gay women & men, couples & groups. Transvestites, slaves, masters, subs & Doms/Dommes. All are welcome and there is great feeling of being able to go out and experiment with your role knowing that you can do it in a non-judgmental friendly atmosphere. The club is run by 2 couples who started the club because they are really into the scene and there enthusiasm really shows. It's a shame there isn't a dedicated swingers venue in Scotland but Violate does go some way to making up for it.
